A NEW SPHERE FOR PILOTS.

PLAN TO MAKE THEM GOVERNMENT OFFICERS. It is stated in Washington that the Secretary of the Treasury will recommend to Congress, at its next session, a radical change in the position and duties plots of steamers. The plan proposes to make ed receiving theirs orders therein, as well as taking out licenses, as is done at present by those whose dutie ent of harbor. By the rules suggested, they will act as at inspectors and customs officers, and will be before taking a vessel from port, to see that all the requirements as to equipment, life-saving apparatus, and number of passengers have been met. A personal inspection by the district steamboat infor will follow, if a pilet finds anything wanting in this regard. By the new scheme, pilots will be charged with the oversight of a steamer coming into port, to see stom-house inspectors board the vessel. The pilot fees will be collected by the Government, and, it is inspectors, agents of steamship lines, and navigators in general. Addison Leow, Supervising Inspector of steamboats for this district, under whose control these proposed government phots will come if the plan is carried out, is of opinion that such arrangment would be open to abuse, and has little prospect of adoption. The observer has been of corruption would not, however, he thought stach to it, as pliots would not venture to detain vessels without warrant. American inspectors should have the right to detain foreign vessels it unseawortsy. Capt. Snow, President of the Board of New-York Phot Commissioners, does not consider the plan fearible, or likely to produce improvement in the service. The present system, he states, works admirably. The change could not avail to repress smuggling, and not likely to be passed. T. S. Regues of the Board of New-York rement with the State system. He thinks that the pilots themselves while it would check emulation among them. The agents of the transathantic lines express themselves much in the same way. They say that capitains could not allow pilots to neglect the safety of their vessels to look after smuggling, and that Custombous inspectors board incoming steamers almost as teom as pilots, and should need no aid from the latter.

A NEW MAYFLOWER VOYAGE.

Among the arrivals by the Hammonia were 19 families, numbering about 100 in all, of the sect of Mennenites. This is the second body of this peculiar riass which has arrived this Summer. The homes of this people were at Fiodosía in the Crimea, where they lived In plenty on considerable farms. The efforts of the Czar to Russianize them by renewing their long-time exemption from military service, and by treing to induce them to adopt the Russian tongue in place of their ancestral customs, determined the Mennonites to emigrate. This colony of Baptists, tinged with the Quaker tenet of nonresistance, has been given by the Russian Government a space of 10 years in which either to emigrate or to adopt wholly the Russian spirit and ways. After that time if they remain they must be content to lose themselves in the general level of Russian subjects, with the enjoyment of no isolation or special privileges of any kind. Notwithstanding the announcement of the Government that any of this sect are at liberty to emigrate at any time within the prescribed ten years, the body which arrived yesterday had considerable difficulty in getting permission to leave the country. Only after repeated applications to provincial governors, to the Governor-General, and bunally to the Minister at St. Petersburg, were they allowed to go. They start to-day for Kansas, where lands have been secured for them. Their first thought was toward Canada, as the English Government promised them humanity from military service, but the greater fertility of American Western lands and the attractions of republican government determined their choice. The members of the company are sturdy, wellto-do folk, with considerable money obtained by their earnings and the sale of their Crimean property. They are good husbandmen, and will form a valuable element of Western thrift. of no isolation or special privileges of any kind. Notwith-

Inspector Walling received official information at Police Headquarters, on Thursday night, of the stealing of a pair of horses, worth $2,500, and a wagon and harness, worth $1,000, from the private stable of S. D. Brown, at Riverside, Paterson, N. J., which was burglariously entered on Wednesday night. Burmising that the thieves would pass through New-York, he immediately telegraphed to the captains of the different recincts to be on the alert to intercept them. Late the e night, a well-known horseman saw an attractive pair of horses passing up Broadway, with a wagon con taining four men. Casually noticing that the barness did not fit the horses properly, harness did not fit the horses properly, he suspected that they had been stolen, Accordingly be promptly communicated his suspicions to Inspector Walling, who ordered a general search. Yesterday afternoon Capt. Wisson of the Thirty-second Precinct captured four men in the upper part of the Eighth-ave. evidently on the way to Westchester County, with all the property in their possession. The owner of the horses being at Saratoga, two ladies of his family called at Folice headquarters and fully identified the property. The prisoners described themselves as Edward Pickies. Edmund Libby, Thomas Brown, and Henry Page. Pickies is a notorious horse thief, and several other companions are believed to belong to a gang of horse thieves.

AN INTERESTING SERIES OF CLUES WORKED UP IN BROOKLYN-A ONE-ARMED SOLDIER PROBABLY

SLAIN FOR HIS PENSION. The mysterious circumstances surrounding the horrible murder of a one-armed man in the vicinity of Albany, on Thursday, Aug. 8, has been partially abraveled by Detectives Folk and Corwin of the Brooklyn Police Department. The body of the murdered man was first discovered by a citizen of Albany, lying in a ravine on the farm of Isaac Jones. The face was downward, the head and shoulders being about four inches lower than the rest of the body. The ground around was dyed in blood, which had flowed from numerous wounds on the face, hands, and body. The threat of the ess than 12 bullet wounds on the body. One wound was n the head and another through the heart. In one of the coat pockets was a copy of a New-York newspaper of Aug. 5, a small looking-glass, and a business eard of Theodore Grunewald, barber and hair-dresser of No. 35 Atlantic-st., Brooklyn. Near the body was found an pen razor covered with blood, upon which was engraved the letters L. V. J. J. Further on was found a gray coat and vest neatly folded together. In one pocket of the vest was $2 10. One of the pants pockets of the dead man was torn open, and the other was partially turned inside out, showing that the murderer had plundered the body. Hospital to await a coroners inquest, and Detectives Brennan and Malone were at once placed on the trail of the murderers. The footprints of two dersons leading from the New-York Central Railroad-treek across an exesvation recently made by workmen who are constructing the roadbed for the new tracks, to a grove situated on a knoll overlooking the ravine, convinced the detectives the man whose body had been found, had been followed and mardered. This belief was strengthened by the fact that shrubbery on the edge of the ravine was tern and bloody, and the grass trampled between there and the grove. They believed that the man was murdered in the grove and his body afterward thrown into

The post-mortem examination made by Drs. Lansing and Haskins showed that the murder had been one of the coolest and most dehberate on record. Five of the bullets were extracted; two of them have been flattened against the bones in the body. The wound that must have proved fatal of itself was in the center of the forehead, penetrating the brain. Another had penetrated behind the left ear and passed down to the musclues of the back. The sixth bullet had passed through the heart and lodged in the left lung.

Chief of Police Maliery of Albany was led to the belief that the murdered man was a resident of Brooklyn from the fact of the business card found in his pocket, and a telegram was sent on the Saturday following to Chief Campbell relating the tragedy and requesting information as to the identity of the body. The dispatch was handed to Detective Folk, and he was instructed to visit Grune wald's barber shop in Atlantic-st. Inquiries there elicited the information that a one-armed man answering the description given of the murdered man had been shaved in the salogn about four weeks previous, and had carried one of the barber's cards away with him. The barber himself did not remember the circumstance, but the information was given by one of his journeymen, named Charles Landerman, who had shaved the stranger. Before departing from the saloon, however, Detective to the present time. The detectives learned that on the Monday preceding the murder a journeyman barber employed by Grunewald had suddenly left his employ, and his wife, who was in the habit of bringing him his noonday's lunch, appeared to be utterly unable to account for his disappearance. This man's name is Emil Livingarmed man called and inquired for him. Emil's wife stated at the time that her husband had an abundance the latter man was, but the detectives concluded that it was the one-armed man. The journeyman Lauderman was taken into the service of the detectives, and through him they found that Emil's wife resided at No. 116 Pal-when the detectives called, but neither Emil nor Mr. Weston were present. Here the additional clew was obtained that Mr. Weston was a one-armed man, and that he had left town with Emil. Mrs. Livingston expected her husband back that night (Wednesday), but he did not come, and the detectives were convinced that he was the marderer, and that the one-armed man was none other than John Weston. The detectives did not express any disappointment at the non-apperrance of Emil, but carefully concealed the object of their visit, and never hinted that Emil was wanted. It is believed, however, that Emil's wife suspected their business, and mrde good use of the interval between the visits of the detectives to communicate with her husband and inform him of his danger. It appears that he had purchased a barber's shop in Eighteenthest, New-York, on Saturday last, for $550, and was about to carry-on business there. obtained that Mr. Weston was a one-armed man, and burber's shop in Eighteenth-si., New-York, on Saturday last, for $350, and was about to carry-on business there, but on Tuesday his place was quietly sold out for one half the amount he bad paid for it. On Thursday the detectives reported to Commissioner Jourdan, and as it was concluded that Emil had fied, it was determined to arrest his wife and Mrs. Weston. Accordingly this was done, and the two women were taken to the Central Office at about 5 p. m. Later, another woman, whose name is withheld, a boarder in the Palmotto-st. House, was also taken into custody. The detectives were very carreful to conceal all the facts from the New-York reporters, but despite their efforts the arrests hade were given in The Tribuns yesterday.

The detectives then searched the Bouse of Emil, and in one of the trunks found two seven-barreled revolvers, with twelve chambers empty. These weapons are believed to be the ones with which the minredr was committed. A good portrait of Emil was also obtained, and copies of this have been sent to Police Departments throughout the countoy. The wife and widow was kept in the First Preemet house until last evening, when, in accordance with a requisition from the District-Attorney of Albany County, they were conveyed to that place by the detectives who have worked up the case.

Mr. Weston, the supposed victim, was well known in Brooklyn. He was a ponsioner, having served three years during the war in the 14th Regment and lost his arm in battle. He made quite a respectable living by selling prize packages containing pens, paper, etc., on the horse cars. He had saved enough money to purchase the small two-story frame house in Palmetuo-st. A few days before he left the city he is known to have drawn his pension money and another sum from a savings bank. Weston occupied the lower part of his house, and Emil, the baker, lived on the upper floor. If the victum, he was without doubt slain for his money.

Emil Livingston is described as being a medium-sized man, of German nativity. From the photograp

CLOSE OF THE SING SING CAMP-MEETING. The Sing Sing camp-meeting closed yesterday morning with a general prayer-meeting in the Duane-st. tent, and soon preparations for removal began. By afternoon the canvas village, which for ten days had resounded with prayer and praise and shouts of triumph, was nearly descried. The formal services of the camp-meeting had been brought to a close on the previous night, when there was preaching in the Dunnest, tent by the Rev. George Lansing Taylor, and in the Bedfordst, tent by the Rev. Wm. McAlister, followed by prayer meetings, which were continued until midnight, instead of closing at 10 p. m. as on all other nights of the meet-ing. The usual closing ceremony of marching around the circle with clasped hands, and singing some well known hymn, was omitted on account of the rain. which had kept the worshipers in their tents most of the time for two days. On Wednesday afternoon there was time for two days. On Wednesday afternoon there was a brief jull in the storm, and a public service was held at the stand; but all the other meetings on that and the following day were held in the large meeting tents.

A few days of rain is not thought a misfortune by the more devout attendants at eamp-meeting, who have the real object of the gathering greatly at heart. It prevents the attendance of visitors who come only for a day, and who not only do not remain long enough to get into the spirit of the meeting themselves, but also draw off the attention of their friends who are lodging on the ground. The rain keeps the young people from walking around and enjoying the social rather than the religious features of the gathering, and almost compels a regular attendance at the preaching and prayer-meetings. The past few days, in the opinion of the managers, proved the correctness of this view. The meetings were well attended and apparently resulted in much good. There were about 100 conversions throughout the session and very many professed to have received the blessing of sanctification. Eight conversions took place during the meetings of Thursday night.

of Treasurer Spinner has just been made public:

TREASURY OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, Aug. 11, 1873.

DEAR SIR: Your interesting letter of the 26th of June was received on the 16th ultime. An answer was deferred because you stated therein that my answer to Mr. Riddle, in Australia, would be published in your then next Saturday's paper. I desired to see what part of the letter spoken of you had translated and published to which your comments thereon referred. Various parts of that letter have been published and Commented upon in this country. The whole of it never appeared, thus doing me great injustice. No part ought ever to have been published unless the whole had gone out, together with Mr. Riddle's letter, to which it was an answer. As it was, with extracts from it here and there, without coherence and without the knowledge of its application to the arguments to which it was intended as an answer, it made me appear in a ridiculous light.

friends of a sound currency have themselves retarded the return to specie payments, by insisting that the only way to bring about the desired result is to reduce the volume of the paper currency; that the first duty of the Government is to return to specie payments, and that the exchange of loans bearing a high rate of interest for a lower one, should be deferred until after that event. This has enlisted the opposition of a very large class of our citizens who are otherwise sound on the main question, but who contend that it is better, and more economical withal, to retire the folias on which a high rate of interest is paid, than a loan on which no interest whatever is paid. Then come the real opponents of the measure per se. Chief among these is the debtor class, which in this country is largely in the majority. The persons constituting this majority desire to pay their debts with cheap money. Next come the manufacturers. These have learned that the suspension increases their protection against the importation of foreign fabrics by the amount that the saper money is depreciated below that in which impost duties are collected. Then come the national banks, which by suspension are relieved, from the to them most irrsome duty, the redersption of the circulating notes in com. There are many other interests that naturally combine with those named, all acting in the firm behef that the suspension of specie payments is beneficial to them. Our Government being strictly representative, of course a large majority of the members of Congress are elected to represent and to carry out these views of their constituencies. Thus resumption has been and I think will continue to be, put off, until the time you speak of, "when that time arrives resumption will be easy, in truth, it will from that cause come of its own accord.

But really I can't, for the life of me, see how the fact how we conduct our commercial relations at home, whether our domestic exchanges of commodities are made through a paper or a metallic reclaim, can af wait until he can place to deep our Government and peoper cent. Thanking you, in behalf of our Government and people, for your expressions of good will and for your kindly offers of assistance, I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant.

F. E. SPINNER, Treasurer of the United States.

August Bergmann, keeper of an oyster stand at No. 1 Roosevelt-st., called upon Inspector Walling, at Police Headquarters, last night, and complained that he had just been falsely arrested, under outrageous circumstances, by Officers Brown and Sullivan of the Fourth Precinct. He stated that Patrick Dolan, saloon-keeper at Roosevelt and Chatham-ets., had brutally attacked him for testifying some time ago against some Fourth Ward thieves. While Dolan was beating and kleking him, the officers arrested Dolan, but immediately released him, and took Bergmann himself to the Oak-station-house as a prisoner. At the station-house, he showed the sergeant in charge marks of severe injuries on his face, and complained of his unjust arrest. The sergeant therefore ordered his immediate release. Inspector Walling advised the complainant to make formal charges to the Police Commissioners against the officers, whose conduct he declared outrageous and very reprehensible.

HUDSON RIVER COUNTIES.

Rys.-Coroner Brennecke held an inquest on Thursday over the body of an illegitimate child, age 5 days, who had died suddenly and under susplcious cirumstances. Dr. Starr examined the body and found that it died from inflammation of the stomach, but was unable to state whether the inflammation was from nat unable to state whether the inflammation was from natural causes or not without making an analysis of the stomach. He declined, however, to make such an analysis unless he was guaranteed his pay first, as the Board of Supervisors had on former occasions failed to make prompt compensation for such services, and finally not sufficient remuneration for them. The Coroner, therefore, left the matter with the jury, and they rendered a verdict that the child came to its death from inflammation of the stomach, and that they were unable to determine its immediate cause.

BOUND BROOK.—As yesterday's 7 p. m. eastward-bound New-Jersey Central train was coming to New-York, two dressy young men got on at this place. They appeared to be looking after some one, but, on seeing a countryman they sat down, one by his side and the other opposite to him, and as the train was in motion they conversed with him. At last one of them pulled a tobacco-box from his pocket, and asked him if he could open it. He said he thought he could, and after he had opened it, they said they would bet $20 that he could not open it again. The Dutchman, thinking that he would win his bet, pulled out a $20 note and handed it to one of the men, who went to the conductor to get it changed. Not returning, the other man suggested that he had run away. The advancer of the money got excited at this, and went out after him, whereupon No. 2 jumped off on the other side of the car, and both swindlers escaped.

THE WHITE MOUNTAINS STAGE-COACH ACCIDENT.

THE WHITE MOUNTAINS STAGE-COACH ACCIDENT.

Mr. Thomas M. Keerl, father of J. R. Donneil Keerl, the young boy who was killed during the accident in the White Mountains. New-Hampsaire, on Monday, returned to Ealtimore last night with the body of his son, which will be buried either to-day or tomorrow. Mr. Keerl states that his son was killed by the falling upon his head of a large Saratoga trunk, which reushed in the skall, causing death almost instantly. The lad was just it years of age, very bright, and of unusual promise. Mr. Keerl states that he, fearing the stage was overloaded with passengers and baggare, asked the hotel proprietor for a wagon, but that he refused, although there were six wagons with horses in his stable at the time. His refusal was prompted by fear of the stagescach proprietors, who ealoy a monopoly of travel at the time. His refusal was prompted by fear of the stage-coach proprietors, who enjoy a monopoly of fraved on the White Monatains. The stage was, he says, not only overloaded with passencers, but was also Beavily laden with large Saratoga tranks. The stage was running between Crawford's and the Profile House, in Francoma Notch. The regular road between those points is considered almost perfoctly safe, but the driver in this instance went two miles out of his way in order to change horses at his own house. This road lies chiefly over a very dangerous bill, at the foot of which the disastrous accident occurred. The driver is alleged to have been an unsafe one, and the horses were certainly not safe. When going down the hill the driver lost control of his horses, which trotted down so rapidly that when they reached the foot of the hill, having to turn a very sharp corner, overlooking a bank, the coach was tumbled over, and the passengers were thrown into the gulley, with the heavy trunks and luggage upon them. Mr.

sharp content of the passengers were thrown into the gulley, with the heavy trunks and lugrage upon them. Mr. Keer is confident that if there had been no trunks or heavy lugrage on the stage, very few of the passengers would have been seriously nur.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded:

Killed.—Mr. A. J. Butler, a banker of Allegan, Michigan; Miss Margie Reeves, and her brother, Mr. David Reeves, of Phomixville, Penn.

Wounded.—Austen G. Fox and bis sister of New-York, Mrs. Culbertson and sister of Ironton, Ohio, are badly bruised, the latter having one arm broken. Mr. Harrington of Worcester, it is feared, has internal injuries. Among those less wounded are Miss Emma Kennedy and Miss Henderson of Indianapolis, and an elderly lady, Mrs. Fox of New-Yerk.
